The Judas Syndrome

In his first letter to the Pope Luther had thrown himself at his feet as an obedient son of the vicar of Christ; in his second letter he still had addressed him as a humble subject, yet refusing to recant his conscientious convictions: in his third and last letter he addressed him as an equal, speaking to him with great respect for his personal character even beyond his deserts but denouncing in the severest terms the Roman See, and comparing him to a lamb among wolves, and to Daniel in the den of lions. By operating with broad conceptions of both religion and translation, this volume makes clear that processes of translation, broadly Corpus Triangulation Combining Data and Methods in Corpus-Based Translation Studies par Sofia Malamatidou Despite the recognition that corpus-based translation research would benefit from the triangulation of corpora, little has been done in the direction of actually employing combined corpus data and methods in the field.
